

RUGBY'S ROAMING GAZETTE

EST 3865

Published - Stogath, Stogath Isle, Western Territories

JUNE 7 4885

*In the aftermath of war,
the future of Squiyles
remains uncertain*

THE WAR IS OVER BUT WHAT'S NEXT?

As the cleanup efforts continue in the aftermath of the war, changes in power dynamics among the various empires are becoming more apparent. The changelings, who have taken over the majority of what was once Squiyles, are now ruling over the area with an iron fist.

Trolls, who were previously confined to the mountain tunnels, have begun to spread throughout the mountain ranges. This has led to increased sightings of dangerous beasts in these areas, causing concern among the local populations.

"It's a very unsettling time for all of us," said one local resident. "The trolls and their beasts are causing havoc in the mountains, and it's only a matter of time before they start encroaching on our lands. We're all just trying to stay safe and protect what's ours."

INTERNATIONAL PEACE MEETING

The unstable landscape has prompted many to call for increased border protections and stricter enforcement of laws in order to maintain some sense of order in the region.

However, with so many empires vying for power, it remains to be seen how this will all play out.

"These truly are interesting times," said one political analyst. "It's anyone's guess how things will ultimately shake out, but one thing is for certain: the future of Squiyles, and the surrounding areas, is far from certain."

Despite the challenges facing the region, the changeling rulers of what was once Squiyles remain confident in their ability to maintain control. In a recent statement, the changeling leader declared, "We will not be intimidated by the trolls and their beasts. We will continue to uphold the laws and protect our borders to ensure the safety and security of our people."

Doppelgangers to hold international summit

PEACE MEETINGS

Doppelgangers are gathering in the capital city of Squiyles for an international peace conference. The changeling rulers, who have taken control of the city following the recent war, are hosting the event in an effort to promote diplomacy and cooperation with other kingdoms. Representatives from several major empires are expected to attend, including the powerful goblin kingdom of Hawthorne. The conference is being closely monitored by the international community, as the changelings are hopeful that it will pave the way for a more peaceful and stable future. Representatives from Gaithyre, McCathlyre, and Turgythe have been requested to be in attendance.

The Daring Timothy Mantooth

FIELD REPORT

As I venture into the snowy regions of the Balnaskor Mountains, I am filled with excitement and a sense of adventure.

I am standing on the shoulders of a giant, my hero, Rex Savage, who was tragically killed while on a field report in the ore lands. I am determined to continue his legacy and to shed light on the often misunderstood world of the orcs and their customs.

Despite the challenges posed by the harsh mountain environment, I have already made some fascinating discoveries. The sparse snow dwelling local orc clans have shared with me stories of encounters with these creatures, and I have even heard there is a mysterious mountain town enveloped in an inescapable fog.

I will continue to brave the elements and explore these frozen lands, and will keep you updated on my progress. Until next time, this is Timothy Mantooth, signing off.

Artist rendition of the anticipated international peace summit

KIDNAPPING NEAR BALNASKOR

Family run inn of goblins are brokenhearted

SLAVERS ON THE RUN

'Narfuuuk', a wealthy goblin noble, has placed a bounty of 10,000 gold pieces for the safe return of his nephew, who was recently kidnapped from the family-run inn in Balnaskor.

According to witnesses, the goblin was seen being handcuffed with manacles by a group of adventurers who were heading into the mountains, where it is believed they may be operating as slavers.

The kidnappers are considered armed and dangerous, and locals are advised to avoid any confrontations with them.

"It was just so sad to see," said one witness, who wished to remain anonymous. "The goblin was struggling and crying out for help, but the adventurers just ignored him and continued on their way."

The family of the kidnapped goblin is devastated by the loss, and are urging anyone with information to come forward. "We just want our loved one back safe and sound," said the innkeeper, who is also the goblin's uncle. "We are willing to pay whatever it takes to get him back."

Blanchet's Botany

Carnivorous Plants

Bonsai Treefolk Pets

Exotics and Plant derived toxins

*Located in Town Square
Drang City, Ingenia
Kingdom of Hawthorne*

DUSK & WILLOW

Magical Superstore, no other selection like it in the Kingdom

- ★ Wands, Rods, Tomes
- ★ Onsite Spell Creation
- ★ Magical Tattoo's

*Located in Town Square
Drang City, Ingenia
Kingdom of Hawthorne*

Artist's rendition of the kidnapped victim

NEW PUBLICATIONS WHENEVER WE FEEL LIKE IT!